"Joshua Simpkins" was there, it is true, but that would hardly be called an attraction, even by the most captions. It may be that the taste of the present generation of theatre-goers runs too much to the class of plays that would have been tabooed in the good old days; it may be that the happy home-life on the farm is not as often portrayed as it might be, and with good effect; it may be that pictures of rural life and country simplicity on the stage would have country simplicity on the stage would have a better effect upon young and old than representations of modern drawing rooms and the laying bare of the intrigues in modern life; all this may be se, but if there is one thing more than another calculated to drive the amusement secker to the coop like boxes, the impregnated air and the short-skirted waiter girls of the variety hall it is such a "play" as the one through which Sait Lakers suffered on Thursday plays.

To-morrow night at the Salt Lake theatro a play that has made a great success in New York, entitled "The Power of the Press," will receive its first presentation in this city. The scenes in this play are said to be wonderfully true to the locations and objects they aim to represent, and most of them are so closely inentified with marine affaire. Act Hi of the play represents a shippard with vessel in frame on the stocks and all the plant necessary for her construction from the working stages to a grind-stone. In act fourth there are three scenes very realistic. The first a shipping office on South street; the second, a wharf on the East river at midnicut, and the third, a bark off the Battery, with the crew in the act of heaving up the anchor on the forecastle and singing one of the old-time shantles so common before the windlesses were worked by steam. Willey, the mayor and bis wife, drove the company about town for a couple of hours and took them through the public school. There is small wonder that the club enthuse when they talk of Bolse; cothing an the west comes up to the magnificence and size of her great natatorium, supplied from a spring of water possessing a natural heat of 170 degrees, and the efficiency shown in the big school was a matter of a storial-ment to the visitors. The stage people said the training of the children, under Prof. Riggin's teachers, was equal in Interest to a theatrical performance. The dub left Boise Wednesday night with a chorus of regrets, traveled all night in a sleeper and arrived in Logan Thursday.

Logan gave the club a handsome audience, and the beautiful Thatcher opera house has seldom echoed to the strains of hearifor laughter than that which greeted "Esmeralda." There was one unfortunated far whach terre—the only one attending the first first possible that which greeted "Esmeralda." There was one unfortunated far whach terre—the only one attending the trip. Mr. Wells, of the Home Dramatic club, received a decided compliment yesterday. He ran down from Ogden to attend to some business and found laying on his desk a dispatch from Edwin M. Royle, asking him if he could possibly come on to New York and play the character of Paden, which Mr. Wells created here in 100 to the property of the country of the co Now York and play the character of Paden, which Mr. Wells created here in "Out of Darkness," which is to have a three weeks run at the Standard theatre commencing May 9. Mr. Wells' business would not allow him to go and he so telegraphed Mr. Reyle. That gentleman and Mr. Henderson spoke highly of Mr. Wells' delineation when the play was first done.

cess, artistically and financially. In Bolse, where the club made a decided impression has year, their reception amounted to an ovation.

No other city in the west with equal population can turn out an audience as fashionable and as all around brilliant as Bolse, and the Home club's two nights were greeted by two gatherings of the largest and best. The rates were advanced $1.25, and though the opera house is a small one, the receipts were close upon $1,000. The Statesman gave a full column to each play, and gave the club an editorial 'send off,' in which it said: 'The Statesman was glad to see such a good house last night for the Sait Laks Dramatic club, and it hopes that to night's audience will be even larger. It is a treat to listen to such a performance, it presents the stage as it ought to be, as its admirers fondly imagine it always is, but which, unfortunately, it very often is not."

There was considerable discussion in Boise over the merits of the two plays, and it seemed that the majority of views awarded the palm to "Esmeraids." Boise audiences lean towards comedy, and parts of "Esmeraida" which hardly created a ripple in Sait Lake, wont with a whirt there. Spencer and Birdie Cummings, who had the comedy work in both plays, were accordingly singled out as especial favorites, though Wells, Young, Lottie Claridge, Mrs. Shell and the others, received excellent notices. The club were also the recipients of some marked social attentions; the gentlemen were given the freedom of the Arid club, and entertained after the performance, by Mr. Cobb, proprietor of the Statesman; Mayor and Mrs. Priester took the whole hardy or a to the recipients of some marked social attentions; the gentlemen were given the freedom of the Arid club, and entertained after the performance, by Mr. Cobb, proprietor of the Statesman; Mayor and Mrs. Priester took the whole hardy or the freedom of the Arid club, and entertained after the performance, by Mr. Cobb, proprietor of the Statesman; Mayor and Mrs. Priester took the work and the

The story that Olea Bull, a daughter of the famous violinist, Ole Bull, had some on the stage as a member of Julia Marlowe's company, published by a Beston daily, is premature. The report created surprise in doston circles. It appears that Miss full is now traveling with Miss Marlowe, however, for the purpose of studying dramatic art.

Effic Shannon writes Sainsbury & Johnson, of this city, that she has declined to sit to Sarouy, Falk and other eastern photographers, aithough repeatedly importuned, because she was so well satisfied with the pictures she obtained while in this city. Sainsbury is very modest, however, and says the clear atmosphere of this region is a great advantage to the artist. The Crowning Marvel of the Age, INDIAN ALBINO

THE QUEER PROGENY OF DUSKY PARENTS. Physicians & Scientists Astonished

READ WHAT THE SAN FRANCISCO CHRONICLE SAYS OF HIM:

Two Swarthy Indians, Husband and Wife, together with their Nine Months Old Baby Boy, which is a pure Albino, have been arousing the wonder of visitors to the Academy of Science Museum during the past three days. Taking in consideration the fact that its parents are full blooded copper colored Indians, with the long black hair peculiar to their race, there is small wonder that their baby has excited great interest among Scientists and Physicians.

Its Flesh and Hair are White as the Wings of a Dove, although its Features are of the Pure Indian Type. Its Eyes, however, Possess the Greatest Interest to Physicians, they are Constantly on the Move; a fact which is accounted for by the reason of some of the nerves being so afflicted that the Eyes are peculiarly sensitive to the effects of light. Although the Eyes of Albinos are Usually Pinkish in Color, such is not the case with Lilitie Dominan, by which name the Indian Baby is called. The color of his Optics change when they are viewed from different positions. The Colors they assume are Pink, Bine, Green and Yellow. He is an unusually bright baby, a well developed youngster and gives every promise of becoming a giant when he attains his full growth.

The mother is sixteen and the father eighteen. When the baby was born the Chiefs of the Tribe decided it was an Omen of Ill Luck and decided that little Domingo (the child's name) should die, the father and mother did not concur in this opinion and escaped in the night from the Tribe, carrying the child with them.

Domingo is the only Indian Albino Child ever born, history has not recorded another, and in all human probability such a case will never occur again.

Domingo is Here One week Only, Commencing Thursday, April 28th.
